Profile

I currently hold the position of Senior Researcher at the Finnish Centre for Pensions. My research interests are primarily focused on the utilization of microeconomic methods in diverse areas such as labor, education, welfare, and health. My career in consultancy has further broadened my interests, leading me to explore also qualitative research methods in recent years. My research portfolio encompasses a wide array of topics, ranging from unconventional employment forms like light entrepreneurship to informal care and vocational rehabilitation. A consistent theme throughout my research is the evolution of working careers.
